As a proud sponsor of the BEYA conference, CACI's support offers more than 10,000 participants, including K-12 students, college students, corporate, government, military professionals, business, and industry employers, with three days of learning, networking, celebrating excellence, and showcasing STEM career opportunities. CACI's partnership with BEYA expands its networking, recruitment, and career development opportunities as part of the company's diversity and inclusion efforts.

During the conference, CACI employee Notashia Thomas will receive the Dr. Eugene M. DeLoatch Legacy Award at the Historically Black Colleges and Universities (HBCU) Engineering Deans' Recognition Event on Feb. 19 for her commitment to STEM outreach in local communities. Ms. Thomas was specifically honored for her current involvement with Black Girls Code (BGC), a non-profit for young women of color to embrace computer programming and technology, and for her previous volunteerism and contributions to STEM.

Additionally, nine CACI employees will be recognized at the Technology Recognition Event on Feb. 18 as Modern-Day Technology Leaders in the BEYA Outstanding Achievement Award (OAA) category for their contributions in shaping the future of STEM.

John Mengucci, CACI President and Chief Executive Officer, said, "CACI is proud of the accomplishments of our BEYA award winners and all of our talented employees. Our team members embody our culture of character and innovation through their dedication and commitment to inspiring the engineers, scientists, and inventors of tomorrow."

CACI's 2022 BEYA Modern-Day Technology Leaders:

- Said Adem, IT Operations
- Camille Carter, IT Network Engineering
- Adiam Desta, Cybersecurity
- Anderson Elzie, Systems Engineering
- Cordel Gordon, Business Processes
- Sharrod Hines, Software Development
- Frederick Ige, Software Development
