

CACI's Meisha Lutsey Appointed to the Intelligence and National Security Alliance's Board of Directors

RESTON, Va.--(BUSINESS WIRE)-- CACI International Inc (NYSE: CACI) announced today the Intelligence and National Security Alliance (INSA) named Meisha Lutsey, CACI executive vice president of mission and engineering support, to its Board of Directors.

"INSA represents the collective needs and objectives of the industrial base with the intelligence and national security communities," said Lutsey. "It's an honor to be selected to the Board of Directors and be a part of INSA's critical work driving mission success through the advancement of practical solutions for the intelligence community."

Lutsey has more than three decades of experience in operations management for defense, intelligence, and federal civilian customers around the world. In her current role, Lutsey and her team support frontline national security efforts, advancing some of the country's most critical missions across a diverse portfolio of programs.

"INSA's success is grounded in experienced leaders who understand both the mission and complexity of the national security environment," said INSA Chairwoman Letitia A. Long. "These new Directors bring proven judgment, operational credibility, and a clear-eyed view of the challenges facing the community. Their leadership will ensure INSA continues to deliver practical, mission-relevant value to our members."

INSA is the leading nonpartisan, nonprofit association dedicated to strengthening collaboration across the public, private, and academic sectors to address the nation's intelligence and national security challenges. INSA's Board of Directors provide strategic governance and oversight for the organization, guiding the association's mission-driven work and bringing together government, industry, and academia.
