

CACI Names Tom Kirkland Executive Vice President of Electronic Warfare

RESTON, Va.--(BUSINESS WIRE)--CACI International Inc (NYSE: CACI) announced today that Tom Kirkland has rejoined the company as Executive Vice President of Electronic Warfare. In this role, Kirkland will lead CACI's Electronic Warfare line of business and serve on the company's executive leadership team.

Kirkland brings deep defense technology, customer engagement, and business leadership experience across all domains and mission-focused technology businesses. He rejoins CACI as the company continues to advance its position as an innovative, technology-first national security company supporting the nation's most critical missions.

"Electronic Warfare is a critical growth area for CACI, and Tom brings the experience, customer understanding, and business leadership needed to help us build on our momentum," said John Mengucci, CACI President and Chief Executive Officer. "He understands the demands of contested missions and recognizes the importance of CACI's technologies, which deliver the speed, awareness, and operational advantage needed to stay ahead of emerging threats."

Kirkland returns to CACI after more than five years with L3Harris Technologies, where he most recently served as President of Targeting and Sensor Systems. During his time at L3Harris he also served as Vice President and General Manager for U.S. Army and SOCOM, Broadband Communications Systems.

Kirkland previously served in several leadership roles at CACI, including Vice President of Business Development and Chief Growth Officer for CACI Products. Earlier in his career, he held senior roles at Thales and Harris Corporation and is a combat veteran of the U.S. Army.
